Free business advice helps launch of online shop

Free business advice worth £1,200 from Growing Corby has helped Corby Mum, Emma Wilkie launch a new online gift shop, www.uniquebootikegifts.co.uk. Emma took advantage of free market research, carried out by Parag Shah from the University of Northampton. The research report that was completed, gave a thorough insight into the gift industry and types of items that people tend to buy as well as the prices people tend to pay. This has allowed Emma to gain a greater understanding of the market to target as well as products that should be purchased for selling.

If you think your business could also benefit from free market research, contact the Growing Corby team today.

Sisters win NHS contract thanks to Growing Corby

Growing Corby has recently awarded a grant worth £2,500 to Hair Geeks, a specialist hair loss shop run by sisters Melanie Jamera and Alma Gundu, helping them win a NHS contract to supply and fit wigs for people who have experienced hair loss due to illness. The grant enabled them to enhance their service for people with medical hair loss and they will be looking to offer a prescription service in March this year as a result. Both Alma and Melanie also attended some of our free workshops aimed at social enterprises.

Could your business be the next Corby success story. Why not speak to us about the support available today?
